P r o l o g u e

Bluewhisker sat on the edge of a large flat rock looking over the great lake. Her silver coloured pelt looked white in the grey light the moon shone onto her. The feline narrowed her eyes studying the stars carefully what are you planning? she questioned to herself watching the stars, the medicine cat hadn't received any prophecies since she became Moonclans newest medicine cat, after the recent death of Pinefall. Bluewhisker felt a sudden shiver run down her spine as the stars aligned to form a transparent cat, with starry eyes. The starclan cat padded down from the sky calmly towards Bluewhisker

What? What's happening?

Bluewhisker thought, though her thoughts were quickly broken away when the starclan cat spoke.

"Bluewhisker, I bring important news for you,"

The starclan cat purred. Bluewhisker quickly nodded not hesitating, the she-cat had questions but they could wait if the starclan cat had important questions.

"You have served Moonclan well these past moons without Pinefall,"

The starclan cat continued, as Bluewhisker gave a sudden small sigh remembering her mentor, she then lifted her head looking directly into the starry eyes of the strange cat. Of course she was still sad about the death of her old mentor, but she needed to stay positive because the clan needed her.

"So, what did you need to tell me?" Bluewhisker quickly meowed, the star clan cat hesitated for a moment before speaking again.

"Bluewhisker, the Wolf will begin to howl when the Raven is vanquished. But the stars, they shall align for the Wolf, and then peace will be returned again."

What? Bluewhisker thought, her fur bristled again when a breeze hit her fur and the starclan cat had vanished, the stars which had formed the cat followed the breeze into the sky.

"Wait!" Bluewhisker called after the cat and leaped to her paws watching the stars, she looked at each of the small sparkling shapes for any movements or signs. Nothing. Bluewhisker dropped her head repeating the prophecy the starclan cat had gave her.

The Wolf will begin to howl when the Raven is vanquished. But the stars, they shall align for the Wolf, and then peace will be returned again.
